INSTRUCTIONS

As a general policy statement, the appropriate costs to be included are all of those costs which a vendor of completely constructed assets would include when determining a price to charge for its product on the retail market. These costs include direct costs and indirect costs. The following is a listing of the types of direct and indirect costs which shall be included. This list is taken from pages 346 and 347 of The Appraisal of Real Estate, 11th Edition.

Direct Costs

Direct costs are expenditures for the labor and materials used in the construction of improvements. The overhead and profit of the general contractor and various subcontractors are part of the usual construction contract and, therefore, represent direct costs that should always be included in the cost estimate. Direct costs also include the cost of:

- Building permits
- Materials, products, and equipment
- Labor used in construction
- Equipment used in construction
- Security during construction
- Contractor's shack and temporary fencing
- Material storage facilities
- Power line installation and utility costs
- Contractor's profit and overhead, including job supervision; worker's compensation; and fire, liability, and unemployment insurance
- Performance bonds

Indirect Costs

Indirect costs are expenditures or allowances that are necessary for construction, but are not typically part of the construction contract. Indirect costs may include:

- Architectural and engineering fees for plans, plan checks, surveys to establish building lines and grades, and environmental studies
- Appraisal, consulting, accounting, and legal fees
- The cost of carrying the investment in land and contract payments during construction (If the property is financed, the points, fees or service charges, and interest on construction loans are indirect costs.)
- All risk insurance expense and ad valorem taxes during construction
- The cost of carrying the investment in the property after construction is complete, but before stabilized occupancy is achieved
- Supplemental capital investment in tenant improvements or leasing commissions
- Marketing costs, sales commissions, and title transfers
- Administrative expenses of the developer
- The cost of title change
