As he was walking up the officer ordered him several times to stop at get back. Subject told the officer that he didn't have to listen and walked up to within approximately 2 feet away. The officer ordered him to get back several more times and he did not listen. Subject continued to yell and scream and come toward the officer. At this point he was extremely close to the officer and the guns and the scene was still not safe.

The officer holstered his sidearm and used his left hand to push the subject back in the center of his chest. The subject attempted to square up with the officer then began to walk as if he was going to go around the car the other way.

The officer advised other officer to arrest the subject disorderly as he was intoxicated and being a threat to the scene. They took him into custody and he was transported to CCJ and lodged for disorderly.

As the officer was still attempting to keep the scene safe another subject began to do the same thing. He continued to come to the area where the guns were and was told several times to stop but refused to comply. The subject took his shirt off and began yelling and causing a scene and walking over by the officer. The officer told him numerous times to get back and he did not listen. The officer removed his pepper spray from the holster and told him to get back he would be sprayed. While doing this, he continued to come toward the officer and did not listen so he was sprayed the pepper spray. Subject left walking and could not be found. Officers did not arrest to arrest him due to them being outnumbered at the time and the scene was still not safe as there were several guns laying around and too many people still gathering around them.

Officers were dispatched to a report of other person trouble. The caller was reporting that a W/M with no shirt on was actively smashing his head into vehicles, and was covered in blood. When officers arrived, they made contact with the male. He was shirtless and covered in blood. When they exited the patrol car, he immediately turned away from us, and tried to throw himself through the front windows of the gas station door. The officer drew his Taser, and advised him to stop or he was going to get tased. Subject got on the ground, and put his arms out. He was ordered to put his hands behind his back, but he refused to do so. Other officers attempted to secure his arms. They were able to get one handcuff on his left hand. The subject was on his stomach at this point, and the officer was attempting to secure the subject's feet from kicking around. He was able to get to his hands and knees, and start to stand up.

Officer advised him one more time to stop or he was going to get tased. Subject began to sit up, so the officer used the drive stun function of his Taser on the lower part of the center of the subject's bare back. The subject immediately rolled over onto his stomach and started kicking at officers with both feet, and kicked the officer in the leg, and stomach. It was at this time that the officer deployed his Taser into the subject's abdomen area. The officer could tell the Taser was ineffective, because the subject was able to pull out the probes while the Taser was still active. The officer deployed the Taser a second time him and it also was still ineffective. The subject still had a handcuff attached to his left hand, and was swinging it around. The officer then sprayed the subject in the eyes, and nose area of his face. The subject swung his cuffed hand at us the officers. The momentum made him fall to the ground. While he was still on the ground, officers were eventually able to get his hands secure in both handcuffs, after having to restrain his arms, and use a joint lock on his right wrist so they could apply the other cuff.

On 8/18/2020 officers responded to a man with a pipe assaulting people at the Share Center (Note - this was the same individual officers were force to employ force on 08/17/2020). Upon arrival the subject was in the parking with a pipe in his hand. As officers approached he dropped the pipe and began yelling. Subject was placed in handcuffs and because he was being uncooperative he was escorted to the patrol vehicle at which time he started to drag his feet, kick, and attempt to pull away. When the subject got to the vehicle and the door was opened he refused to go in, and at that point he was assisted by officers who were able to pull him into the vehicle.

As the subject was in the back seat he began banging his head on the vehicle so he was advised to stop so that he would not hurt himself or be pepper sprayed and he complied at the moment. The subject was found to have a cell phone which he used to call 911. The officers stopped the vehicle and removed the phone. As the officers got the phone and began to shut the door the subject jumped out of the back seat using his head to try and head butt an officer. Pepper spray was deployed but it had no effect on the subject. A Taser was deployed seemed to have no effect. The pepper spray after some time began to affect the subject and he finally set back down. LifeCare was called for a wash down but the subject refused and was then transported to the jail.

Upon our arrival they discovered officers attempting to take an individual in to custody. Once the subject was placed into handcuffs, an officer began escorting him to the rear passenger side of his patrol vehicle. Subject attempted to pull away in an attempt to flee.

Subject began to tighten his body and refused to enter the rear of a patrol vehicle. Picked the subject up and slid him into the rear of the patrol car. He continued to refuse to fold his legs into the back seat, so officer went to the rear driver's side door and with another officer's assistance, they were able to lift the subject the rest of the way into the patrol vehicle.

Officers responded to a possible fight in a hotel room. Visual contact made through the window where a female appeared to be visibly upset. The male would not open the door to allow the female to exit. At one point the male physically held the female back preventing her from getting to the door. Once the male stepped away from the door officers opened the door with a key provided by the office and asked the female to step outside. The male then slammed the door on officer's. Officers pushed the door back and then pushed the male back into the room. Officer then grabbed the male's left arm putting him face first on the bed. Responded to the report of a subject tearing up a residence. He was released from The Field Stone Mental Health Hospital a few days prior. He was said to be bipolar and unknown whether he was currently taking his prescribed medication. The address is known to a few officer's, myself included, as one where methamphetamine and heroin are common.

Upon contact, subject displayed abnormal behavior which was both threatening physically and psychologically. He appeared to be in an altered state with dilated pupils, heavy breathing, and signs of intravenous drug activity. He spoke as if he was assigned to a supernatural realm with activities yet to be accomplished. The behavior was congruent with excited delirium.

After attempting to converse in a normal understudying tone with simple English vernacular, subject ripped a table from a pedestal that was screwed into the floor. While holding his wrists as I stood behind him, subject threw himself on the floor face down. He actively resisted being handcuffed by flexing his arms with clinched fists. Subject was handcuffed safely behind his back as each of us had control of an arm.

Subject tried to run away and also fly by jumping in the air while we escorted him across the large front yard. Several times he stood up and acted normal as if he was going to get into the patrol vehicle. Instead of getting into the back seat, he would drop to the ground with dead weight, try to jerk away and run, or contort his body by flexing, bucking, and arching. WRAP safety restraint system was requested to be brought to our location. Subject was placed in to the restraint system and transported to the hospital.

Officers were dispatched to a domestic trouble call. Subject exited the house through the garage door, holding a flash-light and a metal object in his hands like a handgun. Officers did not initially know that it was a metal object and believed it was a handgun due to the way the subject was holding the object. Officers retreated toward their patrol vehicles. Subject then threw the metal object down in the grass and walked into the garage area. Officer approached the subject and advised the subject he was under arrest. The subject turned and faced him, planting his feet in a fighting stance, with both hands clinched in a fist. The officer then deployed his first Taser cartridge, which one prong struck the subject. Officer then deployed his second cartridge to connect the circuit. Subject fell to the ground for the deployment of 5 seconds. After the 5 seconds was up, subject attempted to get back on his feet, where the officer pulled the Taser trigger, triggering the circuit for another 5 seconds. Once that deployment was complete the subject advised that he was done. Officers placed the male and handcuffs. Subject then admitted that he used methamphetamine.

On 9/18/20 shortly after 0900 hrs a County Deputy attempted to make contact with a suspect with an outstanding felony warrant. Further radio traffic indicated that he had the suspect at Taser point and then Taser deployment which was unsuccessful and was now in pursuit of the suspect on foot. A County Sgt. requested that a BCPD K-9 respond to that location priority one to assist with a K-9 track. While tracking, a deputy broadcast that a rifle was found in the suspect's vehicle. As he was tracking the officer observed the suspect suddenly appear out of a swampy area. Officer gave him loud verbal commands, the suspect hiked up his pants which is often an indicator that someone is preparing to run or fight. In the officer's experience, a suspect that has been running from police that long, typically gives up as soon as they are confronted, but he failed to do so. Suspect failed to comply and just simply stared at the officer making the officer concerned that he was working on a plan of attack since he was not responding in any way. At this point the officer released the K-9 with his apprehension command. K-9 initially by-passed the subject by a couple of feet, however turned to engage him as the subject began to lean forward. K-9 did engage the suspect by biting in the area of the right lat/arm pit area which forced the suspect to go all the way down to the ground. Suspect was taken into custody.

The officer advised the driver to stop. As the driver was running it appeared as if he had one of his hands in his coat pocket. When the officer was able to get behind the suspect again he had both hands free. At this point the officer deployed my Taser, however he completely missed and the wires got tangled in the tree branches. The driver was able to cut through the branches and into another yard. At this point the officer advised dispatch of his location and ran back to his unsecured patrol vehicle. The driver was later ID and had multiple felony warrants from other jurisdictions.

On 9/22/2020 officer was dispatched as a backup unit for a check subject of a white male, black jacket and dark pants that was peering into all the vehicles on the road. Officer located the subject and as he approached in his patrol vehicle the white male was walking on the sidewalk. The officer told the subject stop walking and speak with me. Subject refused to stop walking and continued to walk north on McKinley.

At this point another officer pulled up in his fully marked patrol vehicle a short distance in front of the subject, and then exited his patrol vehicle as he also then at this time gave verbal commands to stop and speak with us. Officers also advised subject to take his hand out of his pocket but he refused to listen to any verbal commands at this time.

Officers attempted to detain the subject, but he pulled away and ran. Subject was given verbal commands to stop in which he disregarded. At this time the officer deployed a Taser with one pull of the trigger seeing two probes hit the subject one in the back area and the other in the left side region.

Subject fell to the ground he was lying face down and was also given loud verbal commands to place his hands behind his back at which time he did not immediately comply. After giving subject more verbal commands he then complied and placed both hands behind his back and was detained at this time.

Officer overheard radio traffic that a vehicle had taken off from another officer. The officer observed the suspect vehicle pull behind a motel. While pulling into the back of the motel, the officer observed the driver of the vehicle attempting to hide, by crouching behind an uninvolved parked vehicle.

As the officer exited my patrol vehicle, the suspect took off running toward the front of the building. It was at this time that officer verbally identified myself as a police officer, and advised the male to stop. The suspect continued to run SB toward the front of the hotel, and ran into the hotel through the front doors. The officer was very close to him at this time, and still giving verbal commands to stop.

The suspect continued inside, and ran through another interior door, before attempting to run up the stairwell. Officer was able to grab ahold of the suspect, by the time he had gotten to the top of the first flight of stairs. While attempting to grab the suspect, he was blading the right side of his body away from the officer, and reaching into his pocket/waistband area of his side. It was the officer's believe at the time that he was trying to retrieve some sort of weapon. The officer wrapped the suspect up as tight as I could as if I was giving him a bear hug, and swung his arms down in an attempt to knock the suspect's hands away from his waistband. While doing this, a plastic bag containing an unknown object dropped out of his hand, and onto the floor. The object was later determined to be narcotics, and narcotic equipment.

When they reached the top of the stair well, the officer was still attempting to restrain the suspect with both of his arms, by squeezing him tightly in an attempt to restrict further arm movement to his waistband/pocket area. While doing this, the suspect began to aggressively swing his head at the officer in an attempt to head butt him. While doing this he was also swinging blood that he had somewhere on his body prior to his contact with the officer, onto the left side of the officer's face, near his mouth. The officer moved my head away, to avoid being hit, and while doing this lost control of suspect's arms. The suspect then punched the officer in the mouth a single time with a closed fist, and again threw him off balance. The suspect then grabbed ahold of both of the officer's arms, and attempted to push him down the stairs that they were currently fighting on.

The officer was unable to reach any of my other defensive tools, so he began to strike the suspect four (4) times in the face area with a closed fist. The first two strikes made poor connection, only grazing the top of his head, and the front of his nose/forehead area. The second two closed fist strikes connected very squarely on the left side of the suspect's face. After the fourth strike, the officer felt a very sharp pain in his right hand, and into his wrist. On the fourth strike, the suspect stated that he gave up, and it was at this the suspect was placed in double locked handcuffs, which were placed behind his back and checked for fit and tightness. Life Care was immediately called to the scene, to treat the suspect for his injuries, and later transport him to BBC.

Officer arrived on scene for a trouble complaint. Officer I observed a female punch a male in the face. The male was attempting to unlock the door so officers could get inside. At this point the female punched the male in the right side of his head with a closed fist. At that point the male took the female to the ground out of self-defense.

At this point the officer told the female multiple times she was under arrest and she needed to put her hands behind her back. The female refused to comply. The officer applied knee strikes to the common peroneal 2 times in her left leg. The suspect still did not comply with commands. During this time the officer drove her elbow into the center of the suspect's back. This is a known pressure point. The suspect put her hands behind her back after this, and was effectively taken into custody.

Officer arrived on scene after other officers requested an additional unit. They advised they were going to take a subject into protective custody and transport him to the hospital for his and the other residences of the house safety. Subject was advised to stand up and walk with officers to the car, but he refused. They were on a tiny screened in front porch that was full of furniture and other items.

Officer grabbed subject's right arm and one of the other officers grabbed his left arm to help him stand up. Subject immediately drove forward pushing the officer onto some of the furniture on the porch. Subject then kicked the officer in the left shin and started pushing against one of the other officers. Due to the small space in which to move, the size of the subject who outweighed the officer by at least 40 lbs. and his aggression the officer struck the subject once with a palm heel on the left side of his brachial plexus. The distraction worked and he stopped pushing for just a second. The officer took that second to grab him around the back of his head and perform and front side take down.

The take down was effective and he was not laying face down on the porch while the officer was trying to continue to hold the subjects upper body down. He started doing a push up to get back to a standing position. When the officer realized that he was not going to be able to hold him down because he was slipping out.

Knowing that he was unable to hold him down any longer and that if the subject was allowed to get back up it would put the office, the other officers and the subject in a position to get injured. The officer instructed one of the officers to call for more back up and then the other officer to Taser him before he could get back up.

The other officer used her Taser to deliver 1 cycle of drive stun to the center of the subject's back. This was effective and he stopped trying to get back to his feet. Officer was able to rotate around and pull his hands behind his back to be hand cuffed.

Subject was then stood up and sit on a bench until Lifecare could arrive and treat his injury to his nose. They transported him to the hospital for treatment to his nose and for a Summit Pointe employee to see if they could help treat his mental issues.

The officer ended up with a large amount of his blood on his right arm and uniform from the subject nose. The officer changed and showered at the PD before getting his blood drawn at BBC to check for possible infectious diseases.

On Tuesday October 20, 2020 at approximately 0013 hours officer heard radio traffic from another officer stating he was conducting a traffic stop in the area of Columbia Ave and La Vista Blvd. Officer then responded to his traffic stop as a backup officer.

The other officer had removed the driver from the vehicle and was talking to him.

The officer exited his patrol vehicle and began to approach the white sedan to see if there were any other occupants in the vehicle. When approaching the white sedan he observed there to be one male in the front passenger seat.

The officer observed him to be extremely nervous. His voice was very shaky, and he was very quiet when answering his questions. The officer also noted that the subject was holding a plastic bottle between his legs by his crotch area and he was only holding the bottle by the cap. When the officer saw him holding the plastic bottle, the officer saw the subject's stomach shaking. The subject was so nervous and his pulse rate was so elevated that his heart beating was noticeable through his chest. This was making the subject's breathing very rapid and shallow. These noted observations made the officer believe the subject was very nervous and that there was some sort of criminal activity going on.

After observing the extreme nervousness from the subject, the officer began looking inside of the vehicle in plain view. He was looking at the subject's waistband when saw what he believed to be, through his training and experience, a butt/grip of a handgun sticking out of the right pocket of the shorts worn by subject.

After seeing the handgun, the officer told the other officer to detain the driver. Since the driver of the vehicle and other officer were several feet away he did not yell that he had located a handgun on the subject's person because he did not want the subject to know that I had observed the gun.

The officer began speaking to the subject, giving him very clear verbal commands. He told the subject to slowly drop the plastic bottle he was holding with both of his hands. The subject appeared very nervous still at this point with shallow and rapid breathing as well as his heart beating out of his chest. It appeared that he did not understand the first verbal direction so the officer told him again to slowly drop the plastic bottle that he was holding and just let the plastic bottle fall out of his hands and onto the floorboard of the vehicle. The subject acknowledged and dropped the plastic bottle out of his hands. The officer then instructed the subject to very slowly to raise his hands to the back of his head and interlock both of his hands together behind his head. The subject slowly raised his hands to the back of his head but the officer noted that he did not interlock his fingers together like he had been instructed him to do. He did have his hands pressed firmly to the back of his head though, which was satisfactory enough for the officer to be able to retrieve the handgun from his waistband area. The officer slowly began to grab the gun. The officer told the subject that as long as he continued to follow commands everyone was going to be safe and they would talk about the gun when everyone was safe.

The officer observed the subject begin to release his hands from the back of his head. He immediately told the subject not to do that and keep his hands behind his head. The subject ignored that command and continued with both hands to reach towards the outside of his left leg. The officer now gave the subject loud verbal commands to stop reaching and put both of his hands up. The officer was now afraid for his safety and the safety of others that he was reaching for another gun.

Subject continued to ignore commands and kept reaching with both hands further down to the floorboard area by the outside of his left leg. The officer now threw the handgun that he had seized from on to the hood of the vehicle. After throwing that gun onto the hood, the officer drew his handgun and pointed it at the subject. The officer knew through his training and experience its common for subjects who are carrying guns illegally in a car to stash the gun underneath the seat that they are sitting in or in between the seat and center console area on the floorboard. This was exactly where the subject was continuing to reach towards.

With his handgun drawn and pointed at the subject, the officer repeatedly told the subject, "Let me see your hands" and to put his hands up. The subject continued to ignore these commands and reach further under his seat towards the floorboard. Because the subject continued to ignore commands and because he persisted in reaching under the seat the officer reasonably believed the subject was reaching for a second gun near his left leg on the floorboard. At this point the officer reasonably believed that the suspect posed an imminent deadly threat. The officer then fired two shots to the upper portion of the subject's person. After firing two shots, the officer assessed the situation and observed that at least one shot had struck the subject on the right side of his person. At this point the officer stopped firing.

The subject was taken into custody. LifeCare responded and transported the subject the BBC for treatment.

Subject also had two warrants that were out of Kalamazoo and MSP. Subject was sweating badly and laying in bed screaming. Subject did not follow any commands of officers. Subject then stood up and was not able to hold still, he kept flailing his body around the small apartment. Subject was screaming things like "don't kill me" and "its/he's following me." To prevent subject from hurting himself or others and also due to the fact he had warrants, officers were able to grab onto subject and they placed handcuffs behind his back without incident. Subject was still acting out so officers called for Body Wrap. Subject was placed onto the ground sitting down on his butt while officers were holding him up and trying to hold him still. Officers were trying to place the wrap on subject an officer was on his knees holding subject up while he was sitting on his butt. While subject was handcuffed he grab the officer's lower thigh right around his knee cap and began pinching. Officer advised subject to let go however he did not follow commands. On 12/24/20 at approximately 2229, officers were investigating a domestic assault. During the incident the suspect was screaming uncontrollably at the other party. While trying to verbally de-escalate the incident the suspect attempted to charge at the other party involved, while doing that, the suspect attempted to push an officer out of the way. Officer then grabbed the suspect by both of her wrists, behind her back, in attempts to detain her and again de-escalate the situation. The suspect then attempted to pull away from the officer, causing him to have to pull her back. While pulling her back they both landed on the couch in the living room.

The officer landed on top of the suspect on the couch, while still holding onto her wrists behind her back. The suspect continued to resist and pull away from the officer on the couch, causing both of them to fall to the floor of the living room.

While on the floor of the living room the suspect was trying to get away. The officer then used both hands to grab onto the suspect and pick her up and set her on the couch again. The suspect was placed in handcuffs behind her back, the cuffs were double locked and checked for tightness.
